

Finca Vibran was founded on the principles of rural community tourism in the town of San Isidro de Grecia, Alajuela, Costa Rica, in the community of San Francisco.

The Bed and Breakfast is located on a former plantation dedicated to the cultivation, processing, and packaging of organic coffee. With this in mind, the coffee plantation, its trees, surrounding forest and fresh water springs were protected, and trails were created allowing tourists the possibility of observing the forest, coffee plantation, birds and other wildlife, coexisting with nature. www.fincavibranbb.com; info@fincavibranbb.com.

The “finca” (or ranch) is located 1,450 meters (4,757 feet) above sea level on the outskirts of the Poás Volcano in the “cordillera central”, or central volcanic mountain range, an area rich in natural resources dedicated to the cultivation of sugar cane and coffee, with spectacular views of the Central Valley.
